

ABSTRACT

Bachelor thesis is intended to bring the issue of use of artificial enteral nutrition in patients with inflammatory bowel disease called Crohn's disease.

The theoretical part of this paper deals further with this serious illness, how and why it arises, its history and symptoms. Complications and treatment options. Further information on dietary measures, and finally describes in detail how the methods of administration of enteral nutrition, composition, types and recommended products. The paper defines the terms sipping, nasoenterální probe, endoscopic and other tests.

The research is part of the questionnaire method for detecting not only the way patients with this disease receiving enteral nutrition, but also the difficulties and complications they bring. Whether rightly edukováni of enteral nutrition and truly understand the meaning of this treatment.

Information was gathered from literature, which are listed in the conclusion.

Key words: Crohn's disease, inflammatory bowel inflammation, sipping, artificial enteral nutrition, complications of enteral nutrition, education, nasoenteral probe.