

Pneumonia is an acute inflammatory disease that requires immediate treatment. IT Is the most common and most serious lung infections. Pneumonia belong to diseases that are the most common cause of incapacity, but also mortality. It is important for early recognition of illness, quality treatment, nursing care and rehabilitation.

This bachelor thesis is presented as a case study of nursing care about thirtyone years old patient with pneumonia. IN this part I follow the clinical picture of disease, nursing care, psychological status, social conditions and education during the hospitalization.