The Influence of Successive Bilingualism and Acculturation Processes on Immigrant's Personality

Abstract:

The Bachelor's thesis is focusing on the analysis of successive bilingualism and cultural processes accompanying it in reference to individuals who were brought to a new social and cultural environment during their adolescence. The purpose of the thesis is analysis of postmigrational processes which occurred to these young people in two ways: the focus is aimed on the process of language acquisition as well as cultural adaptation and acculturation. These basic factors are understood as a key to the question of personality and identity formation of a young immigrant. This research was conducted among the Russian-Czech bilingual speakers and the resulting data were analysed through the method of qualitative research.
