

The theoretical part of this thesis overviews particular theories of agoraphobia between 1960 and present oriented on answering a question of causes of this disease. Empirical part consists of outline of narrative research concerning analysis of life stories of women suffering from agoraphobia. The author is looking for possible causes of this disease by women.