

This bachelor's thesis titled Neo-Nazism and its manifestations in the Czech Republic discusses the development of neo-Nazi scene in the Czech Republic from 1989 to the present. It introduces the definition of neo-Nazism, as a form of political extremism, as well as its ideology and symbolism. Then, it deals with activities that threaten the democratic system and during which there are significant changes, i.e. the new strategy, forms and objectives. The following part is focused on neo-Nazism from the perspective of the Czech police, taking a closer investigation into the activities of neo-Nazis in the Central Bohemian Region. The basic theme is the prevention, which offers a wide range of prevention programs, not only from the Ministry of the Interior and the Ministry of Education, Youth and Sports, since NGOs also have their concerns in the issue. The final section is devoted to illustrative talk, on which this thesis is based.
