

This bachelor work attempts to prove the positive impact of faith in God on life contentment in old age. The work contains four main chapters. The introduction brings definition of the term old age. The second chapter discusses the matters of life contentment and specifies criteria for life satisfaction in old age. The subject of the third chapter is faith. This chapter focuses on faith from the view of different religions, in more details it is dedicated to the Christian faith. The final chapter of this work then tries to prove that faith can help older people to fulfill the specified criteria of life satisfaction. For that purpose the theoretical knowledge of various authors is used and excerpts from the interviews, which were used for this work.
