

Abstract

The purpose of writing this thesis is to analyse the most important aspects of concluding a contract resulting from public tender. The thesis is composed of three main chapters.

The first chapter deals with the definitions of basic terminology in the field of public tender, the purpose of the public procurement procedure and legislation related to the concluding a contract resulting from public tender.

The second chapter concerns with the most important and the most interesting aspects of the final phase of public procurement procedure. I point out that the bidder is bound by its offer and that he has the obligation to cooperate when entering into the contract within specified period of time. In this part of the thesis I also describe the procedure of concluding small-scale public contracts and the procedure of concluding a contract resulting from public tender based on framework agreement. I also examine the publication of contracts in relation to the proposal of Register of Contracts Act.

The third and final chapter is focused on the possibility of changing the contract resulting from public tender. In this context, I mention the case law of the Court of Justice of the European Union, especially key decision Pressetext. On the basis of this decision new provision related to the prohibition of substantial changes in the content of public procurement contracts were added into Public Procurement Act. Therefore I concentrate on this provision in connection with the new Public Procurement Act, which is planned.

At the conclusion of the whole thesis I evaluate the legislation of conclusion of public procurement contract, which is contained in the Public Procurement Act, in the light of its modification de lege ferenda.
