

Subject of this thesis is to inform about the somatoform disorder and outline its position in physiotherapy. On the basis of findings about this phenomenon, the possibilities of physiotherapy are introduced, as well as some means which could be used to positively influence the somatoform disorder within the frame of complex approach along with the principles of treatment of patients with somatoform symptoms.